JEWS WANT TOP LEVEL CLAIMS TALKS FOR VICTIMS OF NAZIS

A spokesman for victims of Nazi persecution appealed at Bonn for a top-level conference to break the deadlock over West German legislation to extend restitution payments.

Dr. Kurt Grossmann, chairman of the Council on Material Claims against Germany, said a decision at the top was needed to resolve the "almost hopeless" differences between the victims and the Government, reports the New York Times. The West German Parliament is considering a set of amendments to restitution and indemnification laws aimed at winding up an eleven-year-old program. Leaders of the claims organizations have been waging a losing struggle for a more liberal "close-out" law.

The critical issue is a demand by the organizations that all Nazi victims who have left Eastern Europe since 1953 be admitted to the compensation program.

These people, numbering about 140,000 are excluded under a 1952 West German law. The law barred payments to people living in Communist countries and set a cut-off date of October 1, 1953, for the filing of claims by people in the West.

A draft bill before Parliament would provide for victims who have made their way West since 1953, by means of a $150 million "hardship fund" out of which belated claims would be paid. Dr. Grossmann said at a news conference that this formula discriminated against one group of Nazi victims. He called the formula a disappointing answer "to the decisive moral question facing the German people."

Dr. Grossmann and Curt C. Silbermann, president of the American Federation of Jews from Central Europe, are in Bonn to testify before committees of Parliament and to put the case of the persecution victims before officials and the public.

Mr. Silbermann commented that restitution appeared to be "a not very popular subject" in West Germany. He noted that a Parliamentary committee had recently modified, to the disadvantage of claimants, some aspects of draft amendments already approved by the Government.

"It seems that a liberal attitude toward restitution is not considered helpful as election time approaches," Mr. Silbermann said, reports the New York Times. Federal elections are scheduled for the fall of 1965.

Dr. Grossmann urged Chancellor Ludwig Erhard to call a conference of organization leaders and key Government officials in an effort "to break the deadlock."

He recalled that such a showdown conference called by former Chancellor Konrad Adenauer on June 8, 1952, saved the original collapse.

"In one day the whole matter was settled in principle," he said. "Now again we have an almost hopeless situation. I believe the time has come to raise the issue again out of the morass of detail and treat it in terms of the great moral issue that it is."

The leaders of the victims of persecution disputed Finance Ministry arguments that West Germany was being asked to commit itself to immeasurable huge payments if the 1953 cut-off date is stricken from the restitution laws.

If one projected the current death-rate of potential claimants and past experience in the settling of claims, they said, payments to post-1953 emigrants from Eastern Europe might not even exceed the Government's proposed $150 million limit.

Finance Minister Rolf Dahlgrün has projected much higher estimates of the cost. But the Government's basic reluctance to lift the cut-off date, says the New York Times, is fear of an "open-end" commitment to compensate any Nazi victim who might eventually make his way West.

Victims who made their way from Eastern Europe to the West before that cut-off date of October 1, 1953, were covered under earlier West German reparation laws, says the New York Herald Tribune. But up to now those who fled last have not been eligible for compensation.

Leaders of organizations of Nazi victims point out that many persons were not able to leave until after the Communist relaxation in Poland and the Hungarian revolution in 1956. They say between 100,000 and 150,000 persons are involved.

Curt C. Silbermann, of New York, president of the American Federation of Jews from Central Europe, told a news conference at Bonn that the October 1, 1953, date is arbitrary and unfair. He said an acceptable new cut-off point would be the date on which the pending legislation takes effect.

A satisfactory new law, he asserted, could be reviewed as the final stage in West Germany's program of compensation to victims of Nazism for their personal sufferings and restitution for losses of property.

West Germany has already spent about $6.75 billion on this program. Estimates put the final total of payments at about $10 billion.

The pending legislation, which has been endorsed by the Erhard government, would set up a $150 million dollar "hardship fund" to compensate victims who came to the West after October 1, 1953.

Mr. Silbermann and Dr. Kurt R. Grossmann, also of New York, a member of the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany, opposed the creation of such a fund, says the New York Herald Tribune, because it would impose a final ceiling on the total payments due to those newly eligible for compensation.

Polish Doctor, Witness At Trial Of Nazis, Says Killers Got Extra Pay And Rations For Wholesale Murder; Deaths Unregistered

Nazi killers at the Auschwitz death camp received money awards and special rations of liquor and cigarettes for the slaughter of prisoners, an assize court was told at Frankfurt.

The testimony was given by Tadeusz Pacula, a Polish doctor, at the trial of twenty-one men who served as guards at the extermination camp. Dr. Pacula spent two years as a clerk in the camp's sick ward, says the New York Times. He testified that his clerical tasks included the typing of letters requesting additional food and schnapps as a standard reward for the guards' killing of prisoners.

He said the extra rations depended on the number of victims subjected to "special treatment," a Nazi euphemism for slaughter.

Dr. Pacula singled out Josef Klehr as one of the accused on whose behalf he wrote many such letters. He corroborated previous testimony that Klehr, a former SS (Elite Guard) medical orderly, killed sick prisoners with injections of carbolic acid. Another Polish witness, told the court that he had seen Klehr dispose of at least 20,000 prisoners in this way.

Dr. Pacula, who astonished the court with his memory, said his list of killed male inmates ran to 130,000 entries from 1943 to 1945. But he added that most of the victims, notably those who were gassed, went to their deaths unregistered.

"And yet our files grew so fast that when Jews were ordered to take them to the chief camp doctor I had to use a wheelbarrow," he testified.

The witness not only remembered the wording, color, and size of a dozen forms used by the Nazi bureaucrats but also recalled many four-and five-digit numbers of individual prisoners.

Another former medical orderly who was recognized by Dr. Pacula was Emil Hantl, who is accused of having taken part in giving fatal injections to sick inmates, says the New York Times. He said Hantl was one of the few guards who were "friendly" to prisoners and did not commit individual acts of brutality.

"Hantl once did not report his discovery of electric hot-plates in a barrack," the witness said. According to Hantl, the secret use of the plates would have been punished by death if he had not looked the other way.

Spectators laughed when Hantl asserted that his "frequent leniency with enemies of the state "could have cost his own life."

Leon Czekalski, another Polish witness who was a barber in the camp, identified more than half the defendants. He slowly scrutinized each of the accused before saying whether he knew him.

Among those he identified was Robert Mulka, adjutant to the camp commandant. He recalled that he once saw Mulka about when a Jewish boy was shot by Hans Stark, another of the accused. He said that Mulka, who has denied that he ever visited the prisoners' part of the camp, also had directed selections of victims for gassing.

Resorting to its previous tactics of accusing witnesses of collusion, the defense called Mr. Czekalski's testimony "useless," charging that he had been seen with two other witnesses before the session, says the New York Times. The court president said the charge would be examined.

West Germany asked the United Arab Republic for the extradition of Hans Walter Zech-Nanntwich, a convicted war criminal who escaped from a Brunswick prison April 23, says the New York Times.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman conceded that there was little hope that Cairo would comply with the request.

There is no extradition agreement between West Germany and the United Arab Republic and Cairo has never surrendered German war criminals. Besides, the United Arab Republic's statute of limitations extends for ten years and Zech-Nanntwich was convicted of complicity in the murder of Jews during World War II.

The former SS (Elite Guard) lieutenant, who was to serve four years at hard labor, was spotted by West German reporters in Cairo's Atlas Hotel. Brunswick legal authorities immediately forwarded a warrant for his arrest to the West German Embassy in Cairo.

Another warrant was issued for the arrest of Margrit Steinheuer, who is alleged to have helped organize Zech-Nenntwich's escape and who is believed to be with him in Cairo. A jail warden, now under arrest, has admitted that he let Zech-Nenntwich slip out of the Brunswick prison.

The escape, still a leading topic of conversation among Germans, is to be debated in the Federal Parliament later this month.

A Deputy of the Socialist Opposition formally asked the Government to explain why the former SS officer possessed a valid passport that got him to Cairo by way of Switzerland. He also wanted to know when Interpol, the international police agency, was informed of his escape and who owns the private plane that flew him to Switzerland.

At the time of Zech-Nenntwich's escape, Swiss police said they had been informed too late to initiate actions for his arrest. More recently Government spokesman expressed doubt that an organization of former Nazi officers had helped Zech-Nenntwich to flee from West Germany, as he allegedly contended in a conversation in Cairo with the German reporters, says the New York Times. The Government of the state of Lower Saxony termed the contention "absurd and incredible."

At least two other former Nazis have escaped German justice and found political asylum in the United Arab Republic. One is Hanns Eisele, a former concentration camp physician who arrived in Cairo in the fall of 1958.

The other is Pankraz Zind. He fled to Cairo in December, 1958, after he had been convicted by a German court of making anti-Semitic remarks.

South African Jews, Opposed To Apartheid, Weigh Emigration Against The Future

Almost unnoticed in the rest of a preoccupied world, rabid anti-Semitism has been incorporated in the daily lexicon of apartheid in South Africa. With vehemence and intensity, it burst the other day upon the Parliament that meets in Cape Town, writes Seymour Freidin, executive editor of foreign news, of the New York Herald Tribune. Concern mingled with fear sent shudders throughout the 110,000-strong South African Jewish community, of whom half live in the commercial center of Johannesburg.

Many are wondering — strictly among themselves since they don't care or dare to say so openly — whether it wouldn't be better to emigrate than to face the wrath of the future. Quite a few, philosophically, are ready to abandon property their families built up over a couple of generations.

"We can't take it with us anyway because of strict laws against remitting money abroad," a leading Jewish South African business man told me. "The signs are clear. We are not welcome no matter what public excuses are made."

The National party running the country circulated some apologies after the uproar in Parliament. Nationalists, who have had a traditional strong streak of pro-Nazism coloring their views, sneered at a couple of Jewish opposition Deputies: "The Jews are at it again," a sizable bloc cried, adding: "Back to Israel."

Much of the blame for opposition to apartheid policies is attributed to the Jews. A South African writer of Jewish extraction summed up the Nationalist's case against the Jews this way:

"They (the Nationalists) are determined that there can be no opposition against apartheid. Some Jews are the most fluent in expressing their anti-apartheid sentiments. This is held against the whole community. Most of them, anyway, are against apartheid."

To be opposed to apartheid is tantamount to subversion. The Jewish community in South Africa also is singled out by the militant apartheidists, says the New York Herald Tribune, as the most influential internal bloc supporting African desegregation aspirations.

Jews also have been charged with furnishing, illegally, funds to Africans to promote their objectives. A demand has already been made — still somewhat muted — to detail income and outgo of all Jewish-held business and property.

There also have been some ugly, outward anti-Jewish manifestations. Apartment doors in some buildings in Johannesburg have been smeared in white paint with the word "Jew."

For the first time in years, perhaps ever, Jews from South Africa are talking in terms of the miasma of hatred creeping over them. They don't want their names used, but ten from different walks of life reviewed their plight with me:

Even if Prime Minister Hendrik F. Verwoerd spoke up himself to reassure them, it makes little difference now, they all said solemnly. Besides, he hasn't spoken up.

The cruel irony, as a couple of writing men noted, is that South African anti-Semitism showed its teeth just as the Soviet Ukrainian attack on Jews appeared — and was promptly denounced in the outside world.

"Maybe there aren't enough of us to make a difference," remarked a South African Jew bitterly, says the New York Herald Tribune. "Or maybe we are guilty of keeping this all so quiet, so long. I don't know. Where and how do we go?"

★ ISRAEL BONDS ★

Samuel Bronfman, president of Canada Israel Securities Limited, the fiscal parent of the Canadian State of Israel Bond program, and D. Lou Harris, of Toronto, national chairman of the organization, told about the role of Israel Bonds in major projects in industry, agriculture, irrigation, harbors, housing, reclamation of the desert, at the annual board of directors meeting in Montreal. "The infusion of some $660,000,000 from thirty countries in the free world, in Israel Bond investments made to date, stimulates a constantly rising state of growth," Mr. Bronfman said. In the past thirteen years of the Bond drive in the United States and Canada, Israel Bonds made it possible to turn depression into progress, convert shortages into plenty, and replace economic crisis with stability. Israel's gross national product increased approximately 40% per annum and, in 1962, exports increased 18% over the 1961 figures, and have shown a substantial increase of 26% for the first half of 1963, as compared to the same period in 1962. In Israel, at the present time, there is no real unemployment. Mr. Bronfman referred all Israel Bond shareholders and investors to such projects as the construction of the oil pipelines from Elath to Haifa; the Yarkon irrigation project, which is now being supplemented by a more comprehensive project to tap the waters of the Jordan River; the building of new towns and cities in the Negev which will continue to grow and give birth to other centers of habitation and agriculture; enlargement and development of the ports of Haifa, and more recently at Elath; the new deep water port under construction at Ashdod; the expansion of the Dead Sea Potash Works as the foundation of a growing chemical industry; and now the reclamation and settlement of the Central Galilee. Mr. Bronfman urged an accelerated sales program in Canada for the next five years. He said that it was possible to achieve the national goal of $5,000,000 in 1964," and that over the next five years of the Third Development Issue, sales of $25,000,000. D. Lou Harris, the national chairman, reported an increase of 14½% over the corresponding 1962 figure of $9,854,050. He added that 11,000 subscribers accounted for the 1963 total, of whom 15% were first time purchasers. Mr. Harris referred to the first Bond redemptions in Canada beginning in May as another source of increased sales, reporting that many Bondholders want to reinvest the proceeds of redemption of the matured Bonds. Israel Bond leaders, headed by Mr. Harris, will attend the mid-year conference of the board of governors of the International Israel Bond Organization, at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, in New York on June 5-6. Levi Eshkol, Prime Minister of Israel, will be there to meet with President Johnson, and speak at the dinner. From Montreal, will be: Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Berman, Lou. Blumberg, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Bronfman, Mr. and Mrs. Sam. J. Davidson, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Fine, Q.C.; Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Grover, Mr. and Mrs. Milton L. Klein, Q.C.; M.P.; and Mr. and Mrs. William Riven; from Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Godfrey; from Windsor, Sam. Cohen. The Canadians will hold private consultations with Prime Minister Eshkol.

★ FEDERATION ★

Of Jewish Community Services: Max S. Kaufman, Q.C., was re-elected president of Baron de Hirsch Institute and Jewish Child Welfare Bureau at a special meeting of the board of directors. These agencies are constituents of Federation and beneficiaries of Combined Jewish Appeal. Elected to the executive committee were: E. Michael Berger, Q.C., chairman; E. I. Roll, first vice-president, and treasurer; Julius Briskin, Q.C., and Albert Eaton, vice-presidents; Oscar Respitz, honorary secretary; Dov Kravetz, and Abe Feiner executive committee members-at-large. In 1963, Baron de Hirsch Institute completed one hundred years of service. The recent meeting officially closed centennial observances. An average of 376 families per month were helped by the agencies during the past year; two-thirds received counselling-guidance; one-third, supplementary financial assistance. The family services department, provided counselling, financial assistance, visiting homemakers, special services for the aged. During 1963, the Institute, working with other agencies, developed the first cost analysis homemaker and child care services. This aimed at improving technical and financial relationships with government bodies. "The visiting homemaker services, saves hundreds of children from having to leave their homes for a temporary period, and keeps families together where the mother is incapacitated due to a mental or physical condition. The specialized service to elderly persons coordinates the Institute's resources with all geriatric facilities in the community. This department aided 205 elderly persons during the past year. The number of Jewish children in foster placement is growing at the rate of ten per cent per year. In 1963, Mr. Kaufman reported, 86 children were in foster care; 13 children lived in the agency's two group foster homes, receiving a total of 24,576 days of such care; most came from homes disorganized by mental and physical illness, separation, and divorce. Two other foster homes have larger groups of children. The provincial authorities provide substantial reimbursement for the capital and operating cost of these homes. Thirty-nine children are supervised in their own homes — on a protective basis. The agency will participate with other English-speaking child care agencies in Montreal, in an experimental project to develop a city-wide foster home recruitment service. The Institute placed ten babies in adoption; screened thirty-two private adoptions for the social welfare court; and administered public assistance for twenty-three children placed in custodial institutions. The legal aid department is integrated with other facilities to serve needy persons who require legal help. Over 800 persons were assisted during 1963 in applying for old age pensions and government grants; marital difficulties, lessor-lessee problems, etc. A "devoted panel" of legal experts give their services to this department. A.J.C. Head Urges Comparative Religion Courses In U.S. High Schools

Comparative religion courses should be taught in America's 25,000 public high schools, Morris B. Abram, New York attorney and new president of the American Jewish Committee, told the annual meeting of the Committee's executive committee, at the New York Hilton Hotel. He said that while the human relations agency opposes religious observances in public schools, reports the New York Herald Tribune, "it has long recognized the educational value of teaching about the major religions, their history, and tradition in this country."

Mr. Abram limited his recommendation to religion courses taught "solely from the historic and literary perspective and stressed that they would not be religious in the sense of observance or ritual. They would, rather, be designed as strictly educational curricula prepared by objective and knowledgeable educators.

The nationwide program would make use of religious scholars in a consultative capacity. But organized denominations as such would not participate in the preparation of the courses, he said. The courses would be offered as electives to high school seniors.

Mr. Abram suggested that a film series be developed as an "ideal means" of circulating the specialized, objective, religious classroom material for the course. The movie would be manufactured with full recognition of a number of factors that religion would be taught without having commitment as its prime objective; that a public school classroom is a captive audience; and that few teachers are adequately trained to teach religion and that some have an unconscious bias about some aspect of the subject.

POLISH DOCTOR, WITNESS AT TRIAL OF NAZIS

In another Nazi crimes trial, a West German professor of medicine testified that he still believed in the Nazi principle of "mercy killings."

The testimony was given by Werner Catel, a major figure in Hitler's euthanasia program, at the trial in Limburg of Hans Hefelmann, a former Nazi official charged with the killing of 73,000 mentally or physically retarded persons.

Professor Calel, who is head of Kiel University's Children's Clinic, said it was "superficial" to think that physicians had to preserve life under all circumstances. He said that in the case of severely retarded persons, the happiness of a family, a mother or a marriage should be the overriding consideration.

Professor Catel, whose role in the euthanasia program is still under investigation, said that Hefelmann enlisted him as one of three experts to decide on mercy killings.

Informed sources said that the United Arab Republic had at least twice in the past refused or ignored extradition requests for former Nazis who had killed Jews in the service of Hitler, says the New York Times, apparently contending that the killings were a political crime and therefore not extraditable under usual international law.

Dr. Ernst Wentzler, one of three doctors who certified deformed children for death during the Nazi regime, said that his decisions had been based on written reports and photographs, not personal examination.

"I personally never saw a single child," he testified at the trial of Hans Hefelmann, who is accused of responsibility for 79,000 deaths as head of a special section in Hitler's Nazi party office.

Wilhelm Boger, the infamous former SS sergeant who is a key defendant in the Auschwitz trial, broke his silence to rebut testimony that he participated in mass shooting of Nazi victims.

"I never carried a gun in the camp nor did I shoot any prisoners," Boger told the court after an eyewitness testified that Boger had shot prisoners two or three at a time at the "black wall" of Auschwitz.

Herbert Kurz, the witness, said he and his friends had observed Boger through a makeshift telescope from the roof of an adjacent barrack.

"The three times we watched Boger he shot between 120 and 150 prisoners," Kurz said. He was imprisoned by the Nazis as early as 1933 because of his work for a Communist welfare organization.

The accused, who had not said a word in previous court sessions, again jumped to his feet when another witness said Boger had killed prisoners with "elbow kicks into the ribs." Hermann Weihrauch of Berlin said he had seen Boger employ the method on a prisoner who was suspected of having stolen meat.

"This is not true," Boger said. "Such things were not part of my tasks nor did I have a peculiar technique to kill anyone."

"But weren't you known as the devil of Auschwitz!" the Court President asked, reports the New York Times. "Didn't the prisoners say 'there comes death' when they beheld you?"

"I was known by many names due to the nature of my assignment," the defendant said. He was a deputy chief and interrogator in the "political department."

"He'd grab the ankles of the children, swing them around and around like balls on the end of a string and then smash their heads against brick walls."

This testimony about former Nazi SS (Elite) Guard Sgt. Wilhelm Boger came from a former prisoner at the Nazi death camp at Auschwitz, says the New York Herald Tribune. The judge presiding at the war crimes trial of Boger and 21 other members of the Auschwitz staff called the testimony "one of the most horrible things we have so far heard."

The witness, Josef Piwko, said he saw Boger "kill six or seven children in this manner and then I couldn't stand it any more and left." Mr. Piwko began to weep. When he had regained his composure, he added: "Boger enjoyed liquidating children."

Mr. Piwko, a retired Polish Army officer, said he saw Boger, "take almost sadistic pleasure" in killing the children of Gypsies when thousands of Gypsy inmates at Auschwitz were rounded up in a 24-hour period in 1944 and gassed. He testified:

"Most of the children knew what was up and tried to hide — under beds, under the barracks, anywhere they could. Boker's men pulled them out from their hiding places and brought them to Boger who beat them and kicked their heads in. He picked up the smallest ones, children between four and five years old, and smashed their heads against brick walls.

"Some of the children had not been able to hide and were held in the arms of their mothers, but that didn't bother the SS. They simply ripped the children away from their screaming mothers and delivered them to Boger. Those who were not killed by Boger or the other SS men were gassed along with their parents."

When Mr. Piwko finished, the only sound heard in the courtroom was the sobbing of a woman juror, says the New York Herald Tribune. After several minutes of silence presiding Judge Hans Hofmeyer said:

"You have just told us one of the most horrible things we have so far heard at this trial. You are a former officer who knows what honor is and you have sworn an oath to God that what you are saying here is the truth. Do you really mean you actually saw Boger smash the heads of small children against brick walls?"

Mr. Piwko answered: "I am ready to swear before my Maker that what I have just said is the truth. Boger was so angry that the children tried to hide that he beat out their brains in his fury."

The 71-year-old witness then said that Boger previously "slaughtered a number of Jewish children in the same fashion during a mass gassing of Jewish families. He kicked to death several young mothers who refused to turn their children over to him."

Asked by Judge Hofmeyer what he had to say about the testimony, Boger answered: "I never did any of these things. I can't say anything else."

Mr. Piwko laughed sarcastically and shouted: "I guess I was the one who did all those things."

On March 30th, 1964, Royal Assent was given to a Private Member's Bill changing the name "Trans-Canada Air Lines" to "Air Canada". This Bill, after appropriate amendments, was passed by both the House of Commons and the Senate. The effective legal date of change will be proclaimed in due course by Governor-in-Council.

We, at TCA, welcome the decision to change the name of Canada's national airline to "Air Canada". This coincides with our own plans to establish a single, definitive name for the company—accurately describing our true, international character and having the same meaning in Canada's two official languages.

Today we fly to a great many destinations beyond our Canadian borders. Our vast air network (now 37,000 route miles) reaches to Britain, Ireland and the major gateways of Europe . . . to the sunny islands of the Caribbean . . . to the key cities of our neighbour south of the border.

It is obvious, then, that the name "Trans-Canada Air Lines" is no longer an adequate description—even though it was entirely appropriate when chosen, nearly three decades ago. Since its first operation in 1937, the Company has steadily grown with the nation and with the accelerated pace of international travel.

Continuous expansion has necessitated certain changes in our signature. As early as 1953, the words "Air Canada" were used along with "Trans-Canada Air Lines" in some parts of our system. By 1960, both names were being used simultaneously thoughout the network. But even so, it soon became evident that a total change was advisable if we were to compete effectively in world air travel.

Much work is required before you will see "Air Canada" displayed on all our equipment and accessories . . . from planes to pencils. Although this work has begun it will be many months before the change will be physically completed.

It is not without regret that we say "good-bye" to our old name. However, we believe the fine reputation that "Trans-Canada Air Lines" has achieved over the years will carry forward with the name "Air Canada". In the meantime, for one of the few remaining times, please permit us a little nostalgia . . . and we will sign this in the old way:

TRANS-CANADA AIR LINES (TCA) AIR CANADA

en-Gurion Calls Beautiful New Book "The Most Successful Who's Who' Of Ancient Hebrew History And Literature"

The Bible in its endless number of forms has always been, and probably will continue to be, the all-time best seller. The events of the Bible come alive in a clear, concise, easy to follow, style in "The Graphic History Of The Jewish Heritage." This impressive work was prepared and edited by P. Wollman-Tsamir, who spent 25 years gathering and arranging the staggering number of names, dates, places, and events which are presented with charts, tables, illustrations and summaries.

Pinchas Wollman-Tsamir conceived the idea for the book, which is published by Shengold Publishers, 46 West 45th Street, New York, while he was a student of the University of Frankfurt in Germany before World War II. In the preface he writes that he "began to ponder the question of how to present effectively the vast panorama of our spiritual heritage and its impressive procession of personages in striking and schematic form. Why couldn't the graphic method and formula used to illustrate scientific data be adopted to Jewish literature?"

Leaving Nazi Germany in 1936, Mr. Wollman-Tsamir began to draft charts and tables in what was then Palestine. They were to form the basis of his work, which was interrupted by the war. He resumed with the aid of many Israeli and other scholars and educators. The work was finished while he was in this country during the past five years.

Of "The Graphic History Of The Jewish Heritage", David Ben-Gurion, former Prime Minister of Israel, says: "You have invented an easy and instructive method which visualizes graphically the chain of generations — the Patriarchs, the Judges, the Kings, the Prophets and the Sages in chronological order. Each one who studies the Bible will be greatly assisted by this work and will more easily make his way through the maze of generations and the endless sea of names. I believe that this is the most successful 'Who's Who' of ancient Hebrew History and Literature."

Joseph Schlang, New York stockbroker and communal leader, is chairman of the non-profit Broad Street Foundation in charge of the publication of this invaluable book.

There is no substitute for the Bible. But there has long been a need for a good key to the Bible, a work fingering its pages for us when we can't find them. That need has now been excellently filled with the publication of "The Graphic History of the Jewish Heritage," edited by Pinchas Wollman-Tsamir and published apparently with great dedication by Shengold Publishers, says Nathan Ziprin, in The Jewish Advocate, of Boston.

The publishers call the book an illustrated companion to the Old Testament, designed to give laymen, as well as students and scholars, a greater and more comprehensive understanding of the Bible. The claim is a moderate one.

Actually the 215-page volume is replete with organized information that challenges the imagination. Its structure is unique both in conception and in execution.

It took the author about twenty-five years to gather the data, draw the charts, prepare tables and to organize the summaries, and the end result is not only a revelation in scholarship but an invaluable contribution to the layman's organized grasp of the Bible. Essentially the volume limns the chronology of the Bible in visual and graphic terms. In essence, however, it is a powerful stimulant to turning to the original source.

The editor of this book completed the registration of 1,500,000 names of holocaust sufferers for the Yad Vashem in Jerusalem before coming to the United States to assure the publication of this encyclopedic volume, says the Detroit Jewish News. The master charts, the keys to graphic history, show the Bible at a glance in the vast, illustrated tables. They deal with the Bible (Tanakh), the Torah (Pentateuch), the Prophetic works, as well as the Hagiographa, the Scriptural works that include the Scrolls (Psalms, Proverbs, Job, Song of Songs, Ruth, Lamentations, Ecclesiastes, Esther, Daniel, Ezra, Nehemiah, Chronicles), the 15 Judges, the 43 Kings of Judah and Israel, the 48 Prophets, the seven Prophetesses, the 25 Priests.

Those who are not fully informed learn that the seven Prophetesses are Sarah, Miriam, Deborah, Hannah, Abigail, Huldah and Esther. The facts that accompany this as well as the other listings give these accumulations of data special significance, making "The Graphic History of the Jewish Heritage" one of the most vital literary works of our time.

Emphasis must be placed on the author's impressive charts, the geneological, chronological and synchronical tables; the appendices that contain the Bible's prophetic messages, the prayers of the Bible, the Miracles of Elijah and Elisha, the lists of the Queen Mothers (Gebiroth) and the Davidic Dynasty.

The charts contain the lists of the Biblical books and explanatory notes about each and the text offers brief evaluations and historical analyses of the Bible.

Each of the Sidras of the Bible is explained briefly, so that the reader has, in authoritative explanatory notes, evaluative material on the Bible. At the same time the editor has made available thumb nail sketches of the major personalities in the Bible, the heroes, the spiritual guides, the men and women whose stories form our ancient history.

The monarchy of Israel is better understood, and the editor provides basic data on the kings who ruled prior to the division of the kingdom, following it up with the events that followed that period and the leaders who played vital roles in the eras that came thereafter.

Wollman-Tsamir introduces us to all of the important Biblical figures. By means of charts and texts, with the additional aid of an exhaustive index, he makes basic facts available to lay readers most illustratively; and teachers will find this volume additionally effective in offering Biblical instruction.

A Master Chart on the Written Law and the Oral Law in their Descent, accompanying this volume in the specially provided jacket of the book, offers graphically outlines of Biblical commentaries, the Structure of the Bible, Midrashim, Gaonic Responsa, codifiers, computations of the 613 precepts, the philosophic works, Maimonides' writings, mystical, liturgical and other literatures.

P. Wollman-Tsamir's "The Graphic History of the Jewish Heritage", an illustrated companion to the Old Testament, is a magnificent work of scholarship, an inspiring guide to the reading of the Bible, a useful reference work, and a most beautiful book, says The Long Island Catholic.

An encyclopedic work, it contains chronological and genealogical charts brilliantly conceived and vividly presented; graphs, annotations, and commentaries; and a pageant of Jewish life, culture and religious history as these are revealed in the scriptures. The general plan of the book, in both text and charts, is to present in chronological and historical sequence the comprehensive panorama of the Jewish heritage. The Pentateuch, the Prophetic books, and the Hagiographa are studied in detail as the religious expression of God's people.

Jewish history and political development are analyzed by word and diagram dealing with the 15 judges, the 43 kings, the 55 prophets, and the 25 high priests. Such a history is complex. The author of this book keeps it from being complicated.

The persons, places, and things of the Old Testament, the Biblical period for the Jewish people, are here presented in such a way, schematically that is, that the relationships come remarkably clear. Catholics share with the Jews the heritage of both the Bible and the Western world's earliest record of civilization. Insofar as this book points out and points up that heritage, it is well worth the serious consideration of us all. What is more, the book will make that consideration relatively simple and visually attractive.

Orthodox Union Head Calls For "Silent Devotion" Each School Day

Religious leaders throughout the United States were called upon to support "a positive program aimed at instilling deep religious conviction in the minds and hearts of American school children which would render unnecessary the current attempts at securing a constitutional amendment permitting prayers in the public schools."

Moses I. Feuerstein, national president of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America, proposed that "a moment of silent devotion at the start of each school day be instituted in public schools throughout the nation in accordance with the sincere desire on the part of the vast majority of Americans for some form of religious orientation in the schools."

Mr. Feuerstein made the proposal at the annual national dinner of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America, the organization serving 3,100 synagogues throughout the United States and Canada. Mayor Robert F. Wagner, of New York, was honored there for his contributions toward the enactment of the Fair Sabbath Law which permits family-operated businesses that are closed on Saturdays to be open on Sundays, a measure vigorously championed by the Orthodox Union. Mr. Feuerstein said that "an adequate means must be found to fill the spiritual void in the schools which was created by the 1963 Supreme Court decision banning prayers in public schools."

BRITISH "SPIRITUAL HEIRS" OF HITLER EXPEL EACH OTHER

Britain's Nazis are wondering who's in charge in England. The No. 1 man, Colin Jordan, has expelled the No. 2 man from the party. The No. 2 man, John Tyndall, says, on the contrary, it is he who has expelled Mr. Jordan. Mr. Jordan, 40, still has the mimeograph machine and the phone and physical possession of the National Socialist Movement headquarters at 74 Princedale Road, says the New York Herald Tribune. His title is Leader of the movement.

"I have dismissed Mr. Tyndall from the movement for gross mismanagement of his office," Mr. Jordan said. "As Leader, it is within my discretionary power to do so." Mr. Tyndall, 29, has set up a "new headquarters" for his Nazis on Eckstein Road in Battersea. He was national secretary under Mr. Jordan.

"I wish to say in contradiction . . . that it is in fact Colin Jordan who has been expelled from the movement by the unanimous decision of an emergency council," Mr. Tyndall said. "Mr. Tyndall's claims are childish," said Mr. Jordan. "Mr. Jordan has been sacked," said Mr. Tyndall.

"Mr. Tyndall was suspended ten days ago," said Mr. Jordan. "Mr. Jordan's expulsion was announced to members", said Mr. Tyndall.

Seven months ago Mr. Jordan married Françoise Dior, niece of the late fashion designer, Christian Dior. Mr. Tyndall was once engaged to her, and he did not attend the wedding. Shortly after the marriage she left Mr. Jordan, saying, "I thought I was marrying a leader and a hero. Instead I found he was a middle-class nobody." She and Mr. Jordan have since been reconciled.

Messrs. Jordan and Tyndall have both served jail terms for "training and equipping their members to display physical force to promote political ends." There are several small Fascist sects in Britain, including Sir Oswald Mosley's group. The Jordan-Tyndall following of perhaps one hundred people is the most extreme, says the New York Herald Tribune. They claim to be "the spiritual heirs" of Hitler.

Arab Versus Jew: A New Factor In The Grim Picture Of Anti-Semitism In Argentina

A delegation of World Jewish Congress leaders, gathered in Buenos Aires for a meeting of the South American Executive of the World Jewish Congress, has received assurances from the Argentinian Minister of Foreign Affairs, Zavala Ortiz, that his Government will not tolerate any racist propaganda against any minority group. This assurance follows right after another meeting that the president of the DAIA (Delegacion de Asociaciones Israelitas Argentinas), the representative body of Argentinian Jewry, the chairman of the WJC's South American Executive Committee, and other leaders had with Argentina's President Arturo Illia.

Behind the concern of the Jewish leaders is the indication of Arab League support for anti-Semitic groups operating in Argentina.

Proof of this tie-up between pro-Arab and anti-Semitic elements was provided on April 27, when hundreds of youngsters jammed one of Buenos Aires theaters in the center of the city to participate in a tribute to the Arab League. The meeting, held in the 2,000-seat Buenos Aires Theater, was not a quiet one and the accomplishments of the Arab League were not the principal subject of the evening. Slogans such as "Long Live Hitler", "Nasser And Peron"; "Jews To The Crematoria"; and "Make Soap Out Of The Jews", were voiced by participants in the meeting, many of whom were identifiable by their uniforms, as well as by their Nazi salute, as members of Tacuara or Guardia Restauradora Nacionalista.

The meeting was convened by a so-called Argentine Arab Youth Movement, and leaflets inviting the public to a "big demonstration in support of the Arab League" were distributed. The leaflets went this way:

"Enough of Zionist Lies. Enough of camps for Israeli military which offend our dignity as Argentinians. Enough of currency evasion and economic criminals that bring misery to our people. Enough of double nationality. Come to the big demonstration in support of the Arab League in the Buenos Aires Theater."

This is only the most recent stage in a long series of anti-Jewish activities which induced the representative body of Argentinian Jewry, the DAIA, to bring to the attention of the President of the Republic, on the same day of the meeting, the manner in which the representative of the Arab regional organization is utilizing local neo-Nazi terrorist groups to promote a campaign of hatred against the Jews.

As the president of the DAIA and the president of the South American branch of the World Jewish Congress stated at their audience with President Illia, Jews in the country are, on the one hand, pleased with the government's promise that peace and order will be preserved, while on the other hand they are worried about the dangerous climate of social tension which is being created. Things went so far that a member of parliament, Hector Felix Bravo, of the Progressive Democrats, introduced a draft resolution whereby the Chamber of Deputies would ask the government whether it had any knowledge of a psychological campaign promoted with a view to inciting Arabs against Jews, and whether it was not true that such a campaign was connected with the action of some terrorist groups and involved open intervention by the representative of the Arab League in the internal affairs of Argentina.

All this is only the most recent development in a growing process of overt anti-Jewish activity displayed by the Arab League in Argentina, as well as in other countries in South America since the establishment of its regional office. These activities have been given public expression since the monthly anti-Zionist and anti-Israel magazine, "Nación Arabe", indulged in clear anti-Semitic agitation in the most rudimentary fashion. This agitation, as well as some more obscure activities of the same elements, has introduced a new factor in the grim picture of anti-Semitism in Argentina.

It was generally assumed that behind the youngsters of Tacuara and Guardia Restauradpra Nacionalista and other neo-Nazi groups were some right-wing elements, some anti-Semitic priests, some German Nazi fugitives, as well as some other local factors interested in undermining public order and in creating a climate of political unrest.

But, as the Buenos Aires weekly, "Primera Plana", an important local magazine, recently asserted, the police seem to have proof that Tacuara's expenses are basically covered by the representative of the Arab League, Dr. Hussein Triki, who appears to have developed very close relations not only with Tacuara but also with right-wing elements within the Peronist sectors. Not long ago, a Tacuara leader whose arrest was ordered by the police because of his participation in a bloody robbery committed in a hospital, left Argentina for a visit to Algeria and the United Arab Republic as a guest of the representative of the Arab League.

Hussein Triki came to Argentina some years ago as the representative of the FLN (Front Libération Nationaliste, National Liberation Front) in Algeria. He is known for pro-Nazi sympathies during World War II which he does not deny. From the outset, even before he became the director of Arab League's office for Latin America, he agitated against Israel, Zionism, and Jews in general.

He travels to different countries in South America, lecturing on the Middle East and attempting to arouse opposition to Israel and to Jews. His usual arguments are well-known: Jews are foreigners who have deprived Arabs of their homes in Palestina; Jews everywhere are guilty of double nationality and dual loyalty; Argentina Jews are to be blamed in particular for kidnapping Eichmann.

The pages of "Nación Arabe" are full of numerous accusations to the effect that Jews take out currency from Argentina, that they violate Argentinian laws, that they commit economic crimes, and so on.

It is against this background that the World Jewish Congress and the leadership of Argentinian Jewry have taken their concern to the highest authorities in Argentina.

Suggesting Changes In Terms Of Reference Of Royal Commission On Biculturalism And Bilingualism

Michael Garber, Q.C., President of the Canadian Jewish Congress, wrote to the Right Honourable Lester B. Pearson, Prime Minister of Canada, the following letter with reference to the remarks on Biculturalism and Bilingualism which the Prime Minister made at the tribute dinner to Allan Bronfman, "Man Of The Year", sponsored by the Israel Bond Organization in Montreal, suggesting changes in the terms of reference of the Royal Commission on Biculturalism and Bilingualism:

Dear Mr. Prime Minister:

The applause of the large audience that you addressed at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel, in Montreal, on April 26th reflected their wholehearted acceptance of your projected image of the future Canadian society. In our first appearance before the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism we expressed our recognition of the primacy of the English and French cultures while taking into account the contribution made by our languages and cultures.

It is therefore all the more unfortunate that the wording of the preamble of the Terms of Reference of the Commission is so much at variance with its declared intent. Instead of, as you suggest, the preamble recognizing the historical fact that the two basic language groups were at the very political foundation of Colonial Canada and of Confederation itself, it instructs the Commission "to recommend what steps should be taken to develop the Canadian Confederation on the basis of an equal partnership between the two founding races, taking into account the contribution made by the other ethnic groups to the cultural enrichment of Canada and the measures that should be taken to safeguard that contribution."

The leading rule of construction is that the grammatical and ordinary sense of the words is to be adhered to. In this sense the Canadian Confederation will be developed on the basis of a biracial equal partnership, from which all others are excluded. Subsidiarily only, there is to be taken into account the cultural contribution made by the other ethnic groups, but they are not included in the partnership for the simple reason that they can never exchange their ethnic origin for an Anglo-Saxon-Celtic or French origin.

Furthermore, the mere reference to the "other ethnic groups" in the same sentence leaves no doubt that the "two founding races" are spoken of in their ethnic sense and not in their linguistic or cultural sense as was intended.

To the best of my recollection, even Lord Durham refrained from using the term "two races" in describing the two divisions of the Canadian society of his day. The term is less apt to-day when such a large number of Canadians are neither of English nor of French extraction. Let us also remember that in recent times the word "race" has taken on a sinister aspect and evokes many bitter memories, particularly amongst the "other ethnic groups."

It must be recognized that the Order-in-Council is the governing authority for all time and that the various unofficial interpretations thereof will not be part of the record. Furthermore, while the offending words remain in the preamble, a number of persons in authority have, perhaps inadvertently, repeated them from time to time in public addresses without any qualification as to their intended meaning, and will continue to do so.

I would therefore respectfully suggest that a way be found to amend the words of the preamble so as to bring them into harmony with their intent and with the declared purposes of the Terms of Reference. If you and the Secretary of State could spare, at this busy season, a half hour to see me and a small committee, we may perhaps make a contribution by way of proposed amendments of a nature not to offend the various groups involved. We would even suggest borrowing some phrases from your own eloquent address where the word "race" was not mentioned in your concept of the future Canadian society and where, instead, you laid stress on "the founding cultures of Canadian society, French-speaking and English-speaking, with the due appreciation of cultures brought from other lands".

As I am involving the Secretary of State in this dialogue and as I have furthermore exchanged some correspondence with him, I am taking the liberty of sending him a copy of this letter.

Yours respectfully,
Michael Garber,
President,
Canadian Jewish Congress.

COURT CONVICTS EX-OFFICIAL OF BAVARIA FOR INSULT TO JEWS

A former official of Bavaria's ruling Christian Social Union received a four-month suspended jail sentence for making anti-Semitic remarks during an office quarrel, when an appeals court in Augsburg convicted Otto Roesch, 55, of having violated West Germany's law against inciting racial hatred.

Roesch, who was freed on probation, had been a state insurance official. He also had served as chairman of a local group of the Christian Social Union, the Bavarian wing of Chancellor Erhard's Christian Democratic Union, says the New York Times. In December, 1962, he got into an argument with a fellow official over a charity fund set up by a Jewish-owned Augsburg department store.

According to witnesses, he said he disapproved of all Hitler's actions but one, and then shouted: "The gassing and destruction of the Jews was right." As a result, Roesch was dismissed from his job and brought to trial. A lower Augsburg court acquitted him last November for lack of evidence, but this decision was reversed this May by the higher court.

No Mass Immigration From Soviet, Says Envoy

A Soviet diplomat advised Israelis to abandon any illusions of large-scale immigration to Israel by Jews in the Soviet Union, who are estimated to number two and one-half million.

Aleksandr Likhatchev, counselor at the Soviet Embassy at Tel Aviv, said he had read in the newspapers that 200 Jews came there from the Soviet Union last year. He asserted that he did not believe any more wished to come.

Addressing Israeli journalists in the Press Club, Mr. Likhatchev said: "As for mass immigration, I can say categorically there will be none."
